NEW JAPANESE THRUST

PHILIPPINE FORT CAPTURED

IN Burma the Chinese Army is still fighting north of Toungoo, while further south Japanese troops are making a new thrust along the Irrawaddy river, south of Magwe, a key town, ninety miles beyond Prome. In the face of the Japanese pressure, British troops are believed to be still retiring in this sector.

LONDON, Sunday.—The Japanese conquest of the Bataan Peninsula has released the bulk of an army of 200,000 men for operations elsewhere, and mass air raids on Corregidor are reported. It was claimed yesterday that Mariveles, a key base to the north, had been occupied.

The Japanese have landed some 12,000 troops at Cebu Island, North of Mindanao, where heavy fighting took place. Australian Air Forces have carried out successful bombing raids on Lae, Rabaul, and Faisi, in the Solomon Islands.—(Reuter.)

BURMA FIGHTING

NEW DELHI, Sunday.—To-day's Burma communiqué said:—"An enemy reconnaissance element appeared advancing northward on a wide front south of Magwe. As yet the main forces have not been engaged. Enemy aircraft is active over the whole front, bombing and machine-gunning our forward troops."—(Reuter.)

A communiqué received in London relating to the Chinese forces in Burma states there have been sporadic artillery bombardments and air raids on British troops at the Swa front for three days. Ground positions, however, remain unchanged.

JAPANESE CLAIMS

TOKYO, Sunday.—A despatch to the Japanese News Agency from the Bataan front says:—"Mariveles, last American base on the Bataan Peninsula, fell at 9 p.m. on Thursday after Japanese forces smashed into the base hotly pursuing the retreating enemy troops." Japanese soldiers, it says, are busy disarming Filipino and American troops."—(Reuter.)

Tokyo Radio reported that heavy Japanese guns had been rolled up to positions on Bataan, commanding a full view of Corregidor, and had poured a withering fire on the stronghold, as Japanese bombers roared overhead to augment the attack. The radio said that leaders of the American troops failed in an attempt to escape from Corregidor several days ago. The flight was attempted in high-powered torpedo boats, one of which returned to Corregidor, another was stranded, and the rest captured, the raido claimed.—(Associated Press.)

C.-IN-C. CAPTURED?

A claim that General Wainwright, U.S. Commander-in-Chief of the Philippines, has been taken prisoner aboard a captured American ship, is made by the Tokyo Ashai, quoted by made by the Tokyo Asahi, quoted by saying: "The general was among the people on board three American ships stopped as they were trying to escape from Manila bay, and captured by Japanese naval units."—(Reuter.)

R.A.A.F. RAIDS

CANBERRA, Sunday. — A communiqué issued here states:—"In successful attacks on enemy-occupied positions at Lae, Rabaul and Faisi, Solomon Islands, Allied Air Forces destroyed and damaged bombers on the ground, attacked anti-aircraft gun positions, set fire to buildings and machine-gunned flying-boats on the water. From all these operations two of our aircraft are missing.

"Lae was raided early on Saturday morning by Allied bombers escorted by fighters. A direct hit was made on a group of three enemy bombers on the ground, and another group of four aircraft was probably damaged by a near miss from one of our heavy bombs. Anti-aircraft gun positions were attacked and several probable hits are reported. Japanese fighters attempted interception, but were driven off after two had been damaged."

"Aerodromes and shipping at Rabaul were attacked by another Allied force towards noon on Saturday. Buildings were set alight by bombs and machine gun fire, and fires were subsequently visible more than 50 miles to sea. Flying boats were machine-gunned, three being damaged. Enemy personnel were also attacked by machine-gunfire. Bombs were dropped on shipping in the harbour, but the results of this attack have not been reported. During this raid fighters attacked our bombers, but were driven off after one enemy aircraft had been hit. Wharves and sheds at Faisi were bombed on Saturday morning. Near misses were reported, but the damage was not fully observed."—(Reuter.)

Group-Leader M. C. McGinn receiving the Lord HolmPatrick Cup from the Minister for Justice, Mr. G. Boland, on behalf of the L.S.F., Howth District Command, which won it in competition.

VALUE OF VOLUNTARY SERVICE

THE value of the voluntary service organisations would not end with the emergency, as the co-operative spirit which they brought about would last on into peace-time, said Mr. G. Boland, Minister for Justice, in presenting the HolmPatrick Challenge Cup to the Howth Group, L.S.F., at Howth yesterday. The other voluntary organisations might be more spectacular, continued the Minister, but actually the L.S.F. was of the greatest importance. While the Government had asked for young men up to 35 for the L.D.F., there was plenty of work to be done in the L.S.F. for men over 35 who did not feel that they were up to military service. He added that it seemed a pity that so large an area should be manned by so small a Group.

General R. Mulcahy, T.D., said that he was not afraid of any Group being small so long as it was well trained. Referring to the functions of the people in war-time, he said that co-operation in working together was desirable in voluntary organisations, and that people should not think that Parliamentary debates stood for disunity in the Government.

Calling for more recruits, Lord HolmPatrick said that it was necessary for anybody who wished to take an effective part in an emergency to join some organisation early in order to be fully trained. The best-intentioned newcomers were more of a nuisance than an assistance. Group-Leader M. C. McGinn, of the Howth Group, said that, although he had made a public appeal for recruits a short time ago, he doubted if the Group had received a single recruit as a result. The speakers were introduced by Mr. Denis Finn. D/S-O. 1.

The HolmPatrick Challenge Cup is awarded for general efficiency, and is competed for among the various Groups every three months. The last winners were Chapelizod, who have now moved down to fourth place. The main body of the parade were led by the L.S.F. Pipe Band in their march from the harbour to the Royal Hotel, where the presentation took place. They were escorted by the District Motor Cycle Patrol, under Group-Leader D. Dickson. After the ceremony the Minister inspected the Group and also the L.S.F. Mobile Canteen. General W. R. E. Murphy was also present.

BRITISH CAPTURE ITALIAN POSITION

The Libya see-saw has started again. General Rommel has withdrawn the column he was operating on his southern flank, and south-east of Tmimi British troops have captured an important Italian strong point, defeating an Italian battalion and bringing in one of the largest batch of prisoners since Halfaya surrendered.

General Rommel's withdrawal may either indicate that the column was merely in the nature of a reconnaissance which has now been completed or that an intended encircling movement has been called off as unlikely to meet with success.

"WE SUBMIT TO NO INVADERS"

MR. NEHRU ON INDIAN FAILURE

AS Sir Stafford Cripps left New Delhi for England on the conclusion of his mission, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Indian Congress Leader, gave the reasons why Congress was unable to accept the British proposals.

He said that he had "swallowed" many a bitter pill" in an attempt to reach agreement and had gone "to the utmost limit." "In spite of all that has happened, we are not going to embarrass Britain's war effort," he added, "but neither could we participate in that effort."

Aspiring to a united and independent India, he wanted India to organise her own war effort.

"I do feel definitely that it would be a tragedy for the world," he said, "if Germany and Japan won this war. I do not want that to happen." But if they would not surrender to Japan, they were equally not prepared to submit to Britain. "We submit to neither."

Mr. Churchill, in a message to Sir Stafford Cripps, endorsed Sir Stafford's view that the talks "will leave a good, clear, healthy impression on the future," and added: "Foundations have been laid for the future progress of India."

Profound regret and disappointment at the failure of the talks is expressed in the Indian Press.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

NEW DELHI, Sunday.—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Indian Congress Leader, at a Press conference here today, stated that he had declined a suggestion by Colonel Johnson, President Roosevelt's personal Envoy at New Delhi, that he might visit America, explaining that he would not go at a time of vional peril like the present.

"We are not going to surrender to the invader, just as we have not given in to the British in the last twenty-two years," he told journalists.

"I want to fight this idea—that we must remain passive; that we cannot do anything against the Japanese invader; that one is really as good or as bad as the other. I cannot tolerate this conception. I do feel definitely that it would be a tragedy for the world if Germany and Japan won this war. I do not want that to happen. A great deal in India will depend on what happen- between Germany and Russia; but, apart from that, India is going to be the crux of the war for the next two or three months. It will make a difference to the length of the war and the intensity of the war.

"Every country in the world realises this, except, of course, the big people in New Delhi and Whitehall—they are slow in understanding and comprehension—therefore, you have these frantic radio appeals from Germany and Japan.

"Naturally the average reaction of India at the breakdown will be one of irritation against the British Government. Nevertheless . . . we cannot afford to be bitter, because bitterness clouds the mind and affects judgment at a grave crisis. Every party knew that India could only function effectively if the Indian people functioned effectively. It does not matter how hard a few brass hats work. If today a National Government of India were to say: 'We are going to arm the Indian people. We may not have the best modern arms, aeroplanes and tanks, but we are going to arm them with such guns as we can make'—think how the world situation would change. Think what reaction it would have on Germany and Japan and also on the Allied countries. The fundamental factor is not what the British Government does for us or what we do for them. The fundamental factor is the peril to India, and what we are going to do about it. We want production to go on full speed ahead. We want people to hold to their jobs and not run away from them. We cannot participate in Britain's war effort. The problem for us is how to organise our own war effort, on our own basis of a free and independent India. I hope that the All-India Congress Committee, meeting in a fortnight's time, will consider this and tell us what to do about it."

SCORCHED EARTH

Asked about the "scorched earth" policy, Pandit Nehru replied: "I do not agree with Mr. Gandhi (who opposed it). I do not doubt that if I were the National Government I would burn and destroy everything that would help the enemy, not caring whose private property it was, but I am afraid the British Government as constituted to-day, if it follows that policy, is going to follow it in a wrong, perverted way, thinking partly of hampering the Japanese, but of hampering India a great deal. I am, therefore, not prepared to trust their 'scorched earth' policy."

Asked how the united nations could help India now, Mr. Nehru replied: "The best thing they can do is to acknowledge India as an independent nation. I am prepared to welcome help and assistance from any nation or nations if they are prepared to recognise India as an independent nation. I am quite convinced that America would like a real popular war effort in India."

Saying that Indians may have to take up guerrilla warfare, Mr. Nehru elucidated how Congress could fight the invader. "We cannot raise a citizen army," he said. "Nevertheless, since this crisis came, we started an intensified programme for self-sufficiency and self-protection, so that we could build up regional self-sufficient units, which would carry on, even though rail and motor transport failed. Naturally these units cannot resist the invading army. They form the background to any resistance that the State or we might organise."

DEFENCE IDEA

"I swallowed many a bitter pill when I said I was prepared to agree to many things so as somehow to come to an agreement. I did want to throw all my sympathy and all the energy I possess into organising the defence of India. In my conception of the defence of India I wanted a hundred million Indians in the Army. It was not a conception of just an army functioning, but of every man and woman doing something—making it a popular war, and of our carrying on the defence even if the trained armies in the field failed. This popular conception of resistance is 'No surrender,' whether the soldiers die or live. That is the conception China has given us, the conception seen in Russia—that is the conception we want in India.

"What we were ultimately told was that the matter would lie within the discreption of the Commander-in-Chief—that he would not come in the way, and that under certain circumstances he would agree. If he did not, he always had the option to resign. That was not the way to bring about a settlement. Our whole approach was one of lighting a spark in hundreds of millions of minds in India.

"I am not going to give in to Britain if she wants to exploit or rule India. Much less do I want the Indian people to give in or be passive towards the Japanese. I want them to resist them to the uttermost—resist them in the Congress way. There is a difference in approach to the kind of resistance we have been offering to the British in India and our approach to resistance to the new invader. We submit to neither.

"Our policy in regard to the Japanese invasion is that we are out to embarrass them to the utmost. Japan comes here either for Imperialist reasons, straight out, or to fight with the British Governcent—not to liberate."

Pandit Nehru said that the lengthy negotiations with Sir Stafford Cripps indicated "our extreme desire not to break, but to come to some kind of settlement, which would be honourable," and that he himself had gone "to the utmost limit."—(Reuter.)

BOMBAY, Sunday.—Mr. Gandhi, in an article in his newspaper, Harijan, says: "Non-violent resisters will calmly die wherever they are, but they will not bend the knee before the aggressor. They will not seek deliverance from the British sake through the help of a third party."

AT KARACHI

KARACHI, Sunday.—Sir Stafford Cripps and his party arrived here this afternoon from New Delhi on their way back to London.—(Reuter.)

N B B L BRANCHES FORMED

HOTELS ADOPT RECIPES

Branches of N B B L (the National Bread for Breakfast only League)—the aim of which is to secure a considerable saving of bread among those who can afford to eat alternative foods—are now being formed in many country areas. The latest branch is at Virginia, County Cavan, where the local national school teachers are showing a lead. Mr. Thomas Sheridan, one of the teachers, is the honorary secretary of the organising committee, and on the committee are: Messrs. P. Reynolds, national school teacher; G. Bradley, ditto; M. Duffy, E. Kellett, S. Hopkins, P. Maher, S. Duffy, J. Lynch, P. Fitzsimons, M. Quinn, J. Sheridan, S. Kellett, and Mrs. O. Kellett.

Our correspondent says that it is expected that large numbers in the district will join the League, the aims and objects of which are being received with "cordial approval."

In other districts hotels and restaurants are displaying the N B B L poster, designed by Sean Keating, R.H.A., and are adopting the special flour-saving recipes published from day to day in the Irish Times.

In Ennis, our correspondent writes, N B B L has many loyal supporters, and would have many more but for the fact that prospective badge-wearers are conscientiously testing themselves to ascertain if they will be able to carry out the rules. Meantime they have considerably reduced their consumption of bread. One of the first to join and display his badge was Mr. Brendan O'Regan, of the Old Ground Hotel, who has instituted a special breakfast and tea menu based on the recipes published in the Irish Times. Among those who are also members are: Mrs. T. Daly, Tulla; Miss Condron, Old Ground Hotel; Miss J. O'Regan, Sixmilebridge; Miss Ambrose, Ennis; Messrs. S. Casey and F. O'Donnell.

These people, and all the others who have joined N B B L, are setting an example to the rest of the country. Have you joined yet? If not, write NOW to N B B L, Irish Times, Dublin, and enclose a stamped addressed envelope for your badge. If you live in Dublin, call in to this office for your badge. If you feel unable to join, will you reduce your consumption of bread drastically and encourage others to do the same?

BULGARIAN POLICY

BERNE, Sunday. — M. Bogdan Filov, Bulgarian Premier, said in a Radio speech to-night that the new Bulgarian Government would follow the policy of the former Government of co-operating closely with the Axis Powers, and would pursue a friendly policy towards Turkey.

In an eighteen-point programme, he stated that the Government intended to maintain a strong, well-equipped army, to liquidate the remnants of Democratic-Liberal ideologists in the country; to enforce strict anti-Jewish laws for the protection of the nation; to fight threats of Communism within the country, and in general to elaborate an economic plan for the country, taking into consideration the effects of the war.—(The Associated Press.)

LITTLE CHANGE IN RUSSIA

FINNS CLAIM BIG SUCCESS

THOUGH the Soviet communiqué reports that there were no material changes on the front during Saturday or Sunday, the supplement claims advances in the Central and Kalinin fronts with the capture of two inhabited localities.

LONDON, Sunday. — A German High Command communiqué, quoted by the German Radio, states: "There was fierce fighting in several parts of the Eastern front yesterday. To prevent the progress of a German thrust, which was successful despite the prevailing mud and thawing snow, the enemy threw rather strong tank units into the flank of our advancing troops. In other parts of this sector, too, there was heavy fighting which lasted the whole day, the enemy trying to surround certain German strong points.

"On the Kerch Peninsula German dive-bombers effectively bombed Soviet tank and lorry concentrations yesterday. The Donetz bridges were again attacked with bombs."—(Reuter.)

The Finnish communiqué says: "In the Central and Eastern part of the Olonetz Isthmus the Russians attacked since Saturday morning all along the front. All attacks were repulsed. Enemy losses have been established as 2,660 killed. Our losses are twenty or thirty killed."—(Reuter.)

"NO CHANGES"

MOSCOW, Sunday.—The mid-day Soviet communiqué says: "No material changes took place at the front during the night of April 11."

The supplement said that a Soviet rifle unit operating on the Western front (Central) repulsed a fierce counter-attack. In another sector, Soviet troops advanced, inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy. Another unit on the Kalinin front, fighting for a fortified position, destroyed seven guns, seven mortars and thirteen lorries with troops and ammunition. The enemy lost in killed and wounded 320 men, while another sector a unit, after repelling an enemy counter-attack, smashed its way into a fortified zone and dislodged the Germans from two inhabited localities. Guerrilla detachments in the Kursk region carried out 48 raids on enemy garrisons, killing 342 Germans and capturing a large number of arms and ammunition.—(Reuter.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Sunday.—The Soviet midnight communiqué says—"During April 12 no material changes took place at the front. Five enemy 'planes were destroyed on April 12. We lost two 'planes.

"On April 11 our Air Force destroyed and damaged several tanks, about 30 lorries with troops and supplies, and a large number of guns, and dispersed and partly annihilated nearly two battalions of infantry. In two days Soviet units in some sectors of the Leningrad front annihilated over 2,000 officers and men and artillery, and destroyed 22 blockhouses and dugouts and a large quantity of war material."—(Reuter.)

A SLOGAN FOR DUBLIN

"If you want a slogan to describe this wonderful old city of yours, I should suggest that you call it 'The City of Beautiful Manners,'" said Mr. Leslie Howard, the well-known stage and screen actor, to his audience when he made a personal appearance at the Newspaper Press Fund Matinée, in the Adelphi Theatre, Dublin, yesterday. He added that he was glad to benefit by his appearance journalists, who were the servants of truth in this as in every country. "I get the news as well, and, perhaps, better, over here than at the other side of the Channel," he added.

Mr. Howard's presentation to his audience was as quiet and unspectacular as his personality. It consisted of two soliloquies from "Hamlet," the famous one, and one less famous—both excellently done; a humorous account of a day in the life of a Hollywood film actor; several good anecdotes, and a demonstration of how he—a non-violinist—had given a display of virtuosity with this instrument in the film, "Escape to Happiness." With one violinist standing behind him doing the fingering, and another doing the bowing, he rested his chin on the instrument, and looked, in his own phrase, "soulful."

Others taking part in the programme were: The Comerford Irish dancers; Mychael Byrne, boy soprano; Olive Briggs, two sopranos, Elizabeth Sheridan and Agnes O'Kelly; Michael Duffy, tenor; Jill Gregory and Christine Du Boulay, of the Sara Payne Ballet; Renee Collinson, Sergeants D. Cullen and P. Flinders, and members of the Longford Productions, who played the Kitchen Scene from "Twelfth Night."

DUBLIN'S SKETCH PLAN

CONSULTANTS' REPORT

THE report and sketch-plan which the Planning Consultants—Professor Abercrombie and Messrs. Sidney Kelly and Manning Robertson—presented to the Corporation some months ago, are now available for public use in the form of an illustrated brochure.

Together with the report, the publication contains a foreword by the City Manager, the recommendations and comments of the Town Planning Committee (signed by its Chairman, Alderman Benson), diagrams showing proposed central city, suburban and "satellite" developments, statistical tables and amendments inserted by the Corporation's General Purposes Committee.

The City Manager, in the course of his introductory statement, recalls the work of the Wide Streets Commissioners, to whose early planning efforts the city owes most of its present wide thoroughfares and spacious central framework. Reviewing the Corporation's recent housing operations, Mr. Hernon observes that schemes "have been laid out with due regard to town-planning requirements," but adds that it would have been preferable "if the planning scheme had preceded construction." The plan, as adopted by the General Purposes Committee, he says, "puts matters now in their proper order."

Dealing with relationships between the Corporation's and the County Council's separate planning operations, the Town Planning Committee explain that the Corporation has been reluctant to exercise any of its regional planning powers—which extend over the Counties of Dublin, Wicklow, Kildare and Meath—"in view of the imminent changes in local administration in Dublin city and county envisaged in the report of the Local Government (Dublin) Tribunal and the County Management Act." As a consequence of such limitations the Committee say that many features of the plan as adopted can only "be submitted to the County Planning Authority," and that such features will be excluded from the final plan to be submitted for sanction by the Minister for Local Government. In the same connection, the consultants say: "We are satisfied that the present boundary is utterly inadequate."

PREVENTIVE POWERS

Other sections of the publication deal with the additional powers which the Corporation acquires as the result of approving the sketch plan and report. These powers are extensive in so far as they enable the Corporation to prevent building or operations, which might prejudice procedure under the statutory plan that is now being prepared by the Consultants and the Committee's Planning Officers. From that point of view the publication will be a useful reference book for property-owners and builders.

The brochure—produced by Messrs. Hely's, Ltd.—consists of 62 pages of unusually readable type. Its price is two shillings.

MR. BEVIN ON ATTACK

Mr. Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labour, at Shipley, Yorkshire, yesterday said that within six weeks American 'plane production would equal the total of Germany, Italy and Japan combined. This was irrespective of British production—already level with Germany—and Russia's. "The tide is on the turn. I cannot tell you when or how, but we shall soon be passing from defence to attack," he said. "The next six months are the vital period. We shall have to take a good deal more punishment—we are not under any delusion about it; but do not lose heart."

DUBLIN MAN KILLED

Peter Cummins, an electrician, employed on the Great Northern Railway, was fatally injured when a motor car and 'bus collided near "La Mancha," Malahide, Co. Dublin, on Saturday evening. Joseph Kelly, an examiner in the Great Northern Railway, whose address is given as Lower Gardiner street, Dublin, was injured, and treated at Jervis Street Hospital. None of the passengers in the 'bus received injury.

5 FRENCHMEN SHOT

VICHY, Monday.—The German authorities announced that five Communists had been shot as a reprisal for the killing of a German sentinel and a bomb attempt on the German Office in Paris. They gave a warning that others would be shot if the author of the attack was not arrested before April 17.—(The Associated Press.)

In connection with the St. John Ambulance Brigade annual appeal, a bridge tournament will be held at 3 p.m. on Thursday next in the Country Shop, St. Stephen's Green. There will be numerous prizes.

MARITIME INSTITUTE

The result of the competition organised by the Maritime Institute of Ireland for a design for a seal which would be "symbolical of the Maritime History of Ireland," was announced to-day. Of the eighty-one designs submitted, the Selection Committee, which consisted of Colonel A. Lawlor, Commander A. J. O'Brien-Twohig and Mr. Liam S. Gogan, M.A., unanimously decided on that of Mr. Anthony V. Inglis, of Cobh. This design, which wins for Mr. Inglis the prize of £10, has for its principal feature a "Viking Galley"—the first large sea-going ship adopted by the Irish people.

All of the designs submitted were of a high standard and, although only one prize was offered, the merit of one other design, and the letter which accompanied it, submitted by Master Michael Meyler, a 12-year-old Dublin schoolboy, decided the committee to award the young artist a special prize of one guinea.

One of the principal objects of the Maritime Institute is to stir up in the Irish people that old enthusiasm for the sea which characterised their forefathers. It proposes to have a "friendly eye" on the welfare of the Marine Service and the Maritime Inscription—the two newest branches of the Defence Forces. It appeals to oarsmen, yachtsmen, and all seamen, steamship companies and their officials, and it will promote the interests of all Irish nautical institutions.

DOUBLE SHOOTING IN DUBLIN

STUDENT AND GIRL DIE ON STREET

UNA ENNIS, White Fields, Phœnix Park, Dublin, nineteen years old daughter of Major-General Thomas Ennis, Superintendent of the Park, and Sullivan (Sean) de Prendergast, Dock House, Spencer Dock, Dublin, thirty years old engineering student, were both shot dead at the corner of St. Lawrence road, Clontarf, at 5 p.m. yesterday. It is stated that the couple were engaged to be married.

Eye-witnesses said that they had reached the corner, where they stood talking. Suddenly a shot was heard, and the gril fell bleeding. Another shot followed, and Prendergast fell dead, a bullet from a heavy parabellum revolver in the left side of his chest.

A man who was walking behind the couple said: "I heard a shot, looked round, and saw a man staggering—apparently it was the second shot. The man fell, and then I saw the woman lying on the pathway near him. I ran over, and saw that both of them were finished. A gun was lying beside them. It was a parabellum, a German make which was used a great deal during Black-and-Tan days."

When Fire Brigade ambulance men lifted the girl on to a stretcher they found that a heavy calibre bullet, from the same gun which had killed her fiancé, had pierced the centre of her breast, inflicting injuries which caused almost instantaneous death.

Officers from the Detective Branch, Dublin Castle, arrived on the scene of the shooting and took charge of the gun and the spent shells which were lying on the pavement. Two unexploded cartridges were found in Prendergast's coat pocket.

The dead man, who was known variously among his friends as "Sean," "Jack" and "Jimmy," was a student in engineering in the National University about 1930. He left in his first year and joined the Civil Service, and returned to the College in 1939. He had a severe attack of pleurisy last year.

Prendergast, who was chairman of the College Engineering Society, was due to sit for his finals in June. During the Spanish Civil War he fought for the Basques on the side of the Government, and reached the rank of Captain in the International Brigade.

The girl was a niece of ex-Superintendent Peter Ennis, who retired from the Garda Siochana recently. Her father, Major-General T. Ennis, took a prominent part in the Irish Civil War.

A friend of Prendergast said last night that he had known that the dead man was acquainted with Miss Ennis, who was "a very pretty girl."

Mr. Oscar Traynor, Minister for Defence, was passing in his car on his way home from a football semi-final when he saw two people lying on the ground with a cluster of people around them. He immediately stopped the car to see if he could be of any assistance.

R.A.F. SWEEP OVER FRANCE

FOURTEEN 'PLANES LOST

A British Air Ministry communiqué last night stated:—"Squadrons of our fighters, with a small force of bombers, were over Northern France early this afternoon. The railway yards at Hazebrouck were bombed and bursts were seen on the target.

"Enemy fighters were encountered in strength, and there were many combats. Four enemy fighters were destroyed. We lost one bomber and thirteen fighters, but the pilots of two of the fighters are known to be safe."

A German High Command announcement read over the Calais Radio stated:—"A dozen British bombers, escorted by fifty Spitfires, attempted to raid Northern France and Belgium to-day. German fighters of the Focke-Wulfe type engaged the 'planes over the Channel coast and dispersed the bomber formation. In fierce air battles twelve Spitfires were shot down. The British fighters did not succeed in clearing the way for their bombers, which scattered their bombs without causing any military damage. One bomber of the Boston type was also shot down."

SEASON 'BUS TICKETS

As the Dublin United Transport Company can no longer guarantee transport for the period stated on its season tickets, issue of these will cease as from May 1 next. This was announced on Saturday by the company's Public Relations Officer, Mr. Leslie A. Luke, who also stated that the number of stopping places for 'buses in the city is to be further reduced.

In a letter to ticket-holders, the company states that weekly tickets will be on sale each Monday, and may be had from the conductors. They will be at the ordinary fare rate and only available for one daily journey to and from the city.

ORANGES AND LEMONS

Oranges and lemons are to be cheaper. The Minister for Supplies has made an Order fixing maximum prices at levels below those at present in force. These maximum prices are:

Oranges—2½d., 4d. and 5d., according to size.

Lemons—4½d. and 6½d. each, according to size.

Owing to the nature of the fruit trade, there is much difficulty in the fixation of prices, those given being maximum. It is anticipated that competition will make both oranges and lemons available to the public at prices below those mentioned.

RAIDS ON MALTA

MALTA, Sunday.—A late official report, covering air operations since 5 p.m. yesterday, said: A severe attack took place yesterday evening on the harbour and an aerodrome. Junkers 88s and 87s took part, while Messerschmitt 109s machine-gunned several areas in the north of the island. Heavy and light anti-aircraft fire destroyed one Junkers 88, and probably destroyed two Messerschmitt 109s.

To-day was comparatively free up to 5 p.m., save for one severe attack on the harbour area.—(Associated Press.)

MR. CASEY ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

Mr. R. G. Casey, former Australian Minister to the United States and now Minister of State in the Middle East, arrived at a Home Counties airport yesterday.

He told a reporter:—"I have to see the Prime Minister first, and after that I hope to get down to work very quickly in my new post." The new plans for the Pacific Council appeared to be working very smoothly, and he did not expect any difficulties.

Dr. Evatt, his successor in America, he said, was settling down very well. "The American people are wholeheartedly determined to clean up the Pacific business. I do not think there are any political divisions in the United States in anything connected with the war.

"I spent the last two years trying to bring Australia and the United States still closer together—I like to feel with some little success. In my new field, if I am successful, I shall be serving the Empire as a whole and, not the least part, my own country, Australia, at the same time."

The U.S. Navy Department announced yesterday that a Norwegian merchant vessel had been torpedoed off the Atlantic coast.—(Reuter.)

PUBLIC WARNING

Many citizens have responded to the appeals to reduce their bread and flour consumption, but it is vitally necessary that the response should be more general.

Many people still fail to face their obligation to reduce consumption immediately. Alternative foods must be used much more extensively by everyone.

National duty demands that everyone contributes to the conservation of supplies, by making an immediate and effective reduction in his own consumption.

The Indian Plan

Sir Stafford Cripps is returning from India to England, having failed in his mission. The failure is no fault of his: the British Government's proposals were unacceptable, and no compromise as possible between the changes that Whitehall was prepared to offer and those which the great Indian parties were willing to accept. On the face of it, there was little chance that the original plan would find favour. The Congress Party was shy of long-term promises, and was reluctant to approve any plan of government which would not put a very real measure of power in its hands at once, rather than after the war; the Moslem League held that, while the plan offered the shadow of pakistan —its conception of an independent Moslem State, or series of States—it denied the substance. Nevertheless, agreement might have been reached by means of Sir Stafford's bargaining powers if the Congress Party had not stiffened its demands; in fact, for a couple of days last week there was general hope that the apparent deadlock had been resolved. Defence has been the difficulty. The Congress Party would be satisfied with nothing less than the transfer of all responsibility for Indian defence into Indian hands—which, in effect, meant the subordination of General Wavell, Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army, and Defence Member on the Viceroy's Executive Council, to the new Indian régime. It is not surprising that the British Government vetoed any such proposal. If not an exact science, war is, at any rate, a highly professional one, and so radical a change in the administration of India's defences while the Japanese, as it were, are hammering at the gates would have been terribly dangerous. Instead, Great Britain offered a compromise, on which it might have been possible to attain agreement; but all hope vanished when the Congress Party, enlarging its ground, found fault with the whole basis of the proposals. As Sir Stafford Cripps revealed in his broadcast from New Delhi on Saturday, it simply decided that the form of government which Britain offered for the duration of the war was inadequate. It would be satisfied with nothing less than an immediate change to Dominion status and a "true National Government, with a Cabinet of Indian leaders untrammelled by any control by the Viceroy or the British Cabinet." The discussions were back where they began.

What will happen now? Surely a nation never has found itself in so curious a position. Genuine co-operation between the British Government and the huge mass of the Indian people would seem to have been ruled out. Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, the "live wire" of the Congress Party, declares that no effort will be made to induce the Indian people to assist Great Britain's war effort. Yet he makes no secret of his dislike and fear of the Japanese, who already have bombed Ceylon, and are sinking ships in Indian waters. Mr. Nehru—we presume that he really represents a very large section of Indian opinion—says, in effect, that his followers will do nothing: they will neither help nor hinder; they simply will not co-operate with Great Britain. Instead, they will fight on their own behalf: they will form themselves into local defence bands, to act as centres of resistance; they will scorch the earth; they will defend themselves against the Japanese with all the weapons, however poor, at their disposal—but they will do all these things independently of the British. Mr. Gandhi, steadfast to his philosophy, takes a different attitude. He also would resist the Japanese, but the resistance would be "passive"; it would consist of the denying of any help whatsoever to the invader, when, and if, he comes "Passive resistance" can be an effective policy in certain circumstances, but one hardly can believe that it would have decisive results in the case of the Japanese. Either policy could help Indian defence: but what an enormous difference Mr Nehru's plan would make to the country if only it were carried out in harmony with the British administration of defence! From the Allied point of view, the failure of Sir Stafford Cripp's mission—even if it may be productive of good in the future—is a severe blow. Mr. Nehru's picture of an army, or militia, of a hundred million Indians, working in co-operation with General Wavell, and fired with the zeal which has animated the Russians and the Chinese, is an impressive one—and one that could give the Japanese food for thought. It seems, however, that the dream cannot be realised. We do not know what the "reactions" of the dumb masses of India are to the Japanese advance, but between the aspirations of their leaders and the sentiments of the British Government the gulf is, apparently, too wide for bridging. Perhaps, a new "formula" may yet be devised under the stimulus of the Japanese advance. If so, it must be found at once.

Television

Mr. John L. Baird, inventor of television, has now completed the perfect television set, according to an article by himself in the March issue of the Belgian review, Message. Not only is this new television set an improvement on all previous sets as far as clarity of vision is concerned, but it also reproduces the images in full colour with a third-dimensional stereoscopic effect. When war broke out television was at last receiving the attention it deserved from the general public; television sets were being purchased in large quantities, and television screens were being installed in the cinemas; several cinemas used this method to show the finish of the Derby and the boat race while it was happening. Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities, however, B.B.C. transmissions were stopped, the sale of sets ceased forthwith, and orders to install screens in cinemas were cancelled at once. At this time, colour television was still in the experimental stages; it had been demonstrated as early as 1928, but it never became a commercially sound proposition until 1940, when, to all intents an purposes, commercial television had ceased. Since he could not hope for widespread use of his colour television for some years, Baird decided to apply himself to the task of achieving a still more realistic screen image, which meant one thing—the introduction of stereoscopy. By devising a camera which sent out two images—one corresponding to the left eye and one to the right eye—and a receiving mechanism which co-ordinated the two images and reproduced them on a screen so that the left eye saw only the left-hand image, and the right eye only the right-hand image, just as would happen to a person observing an actual scene, Mr. Baird has succeeded in producing a perfect three-dimensional, full-colour image, which, after the war, could be put on the market at a price that would not be by any means prohibitive. Mr. Baird forsees that his latest invention will revolutionise the cinema industry; television in the cinemas, he suggests, will begin as an adjunct to the newsreel—in its pre-war capacity, in other words—but eventually the cinema audiences will witness stage plays, music-hall turns, football matches and every form of entertainment transmitted from central studios to television screens, and reproduced in full colour and stereoscopic relief. Films will not cease to be made, he says, but they, too, will be broadcast from central studios and presented to the public upon television screens, both in the home and in the cinema. It is a pity that some of the useful and humanitarian arts of mankind could not progress as rapidly as the art of entertainment, which seems to reach new pinnacles of perfection with every year that passes.

DUBLIN METHODIST COUNCIL

The concluding meeting of the Dublin Methodist Council for the session 1941-2 was held on the 9th inst. in the Centenary Church schoolroom, when there was a large attendance of members. The chair was taken by the President of the Council, the Rev. J. M. Alley.

The Council were glad to learn that, on the suggestion of Mr. F. Cole, President of the Belfast Methodist Council, that body had decided to send representatives to convey its greetings to the Dublin Council on the occasion of the celebration of its Jubilee, next October. On the motion of Mr. Basil E Booth, seconded by Mrs. D. M. Weir, the Council requested its Executive Committee to consider, in consultation with such persons as they may wish to co-opt for the purpose, the question of the desirability of the formation in the Irish Methodist Church of a total abstinence organisation similar to the Pioneers.

The main subject for the evening's discussion was "Family Life: Christian values at stake in the Home." It was introduced by the Rev. Dr. McCracken and Mr S. J. Hurd, A.R.I.B.A.

HANDEL IN DUBLIN

(By the Dean of St. Patrick's.)

THE happiest time of Handel's eventful life was his nine months' visit to Dublin. He arrived on 18th November, 1741, and was received by all classes, from the Viceroy down, with the greatest honour and approbation. Dublin society greeted him with open arms. The musicians forgot their chronic grievances and flocked around the great master, offering him their services all the time he was here. Dublin was then a musical capital—musical circles abounded; one of these, conducted by Lord Mornington, father of the Duke of Wellington, consisted mainly of titled persons. The Cathedral Chapters and choirs, and Mr. Dubourgh's orchestra, the King's band, etc., placed themselves at his disposal. In Dublin the wounded spirit of the great master was soothed and gladdened by the enthusiasm of his reception. He was glad to get away from London, where cruel jealousy and professional envy had embittered his life. Even politics interposed a poisonous vapour. When Tories applauded Handel, the Whigs boomed Bononcini. Swift was no musician, but his two greatest friends in London, Arbuthnot and Pope, were enthusiastic admirers of Handel, and kept the Dean well-informed. Swift amused himself with the well-known epigram·

"Some say that Signor Bononcini
Compared to Handel is a ninny,
Others aver that to him, Handel
Is scarcely fit to hold the candle.
Strange that such difference should be
'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee."

Handel's health broke down under the weight of disappointment, neglect and opposition. In Dublin he was appreciated and honoured; the world of unrest was left behind him. His concerts, given every fortnight, were crowded, and were held in the Music Hall in Fishamble street. This hall was opened to the public a few days before Handel's arrival, and it is described in the Press as "a new room finished in the genteelist manner." It accommodated about 400 people. Here, on Tuesday, 13th April, 1742, Handel's greatest oratorio, "The Messiah," was first sung. Great preparations were made for this event. It is interesting to note that one-way traffic was ordered—all coaches to come down Fishamble street." For the convenience of the "ready emptying of the house no chairs will be admitted in Fishamble street, but hazard chairs." Private Sedan chairs were to proceed "by the little passage at Copper Alley." Ladies were requested not to use hoops, or gentlemen their swords, in order to provide more room. "For the ventilation one pane of glass has been removed from the top of each window." All the performers gave their services gratuitously in aid of three Dublin charities — Mercer's Hospital, The Charitable Infirmary, and the Musical Society for the Relief of Imprisoned Debtors. The condition of the last in the gaols was terrible—"on this side of Hell there is nothing to equal them," wrote John Wesley. Happy were the poor wretches who died soonest from starvation.

Handel got the substance of his choirs and several soloists from the cathedral choirs—Dean Swift and Dean Cobbe both agreeing to their attendance. The orchestra was mainly supplied by Dubourgh, "Master of the King's Music in Ireland." Handel never forgot Matt Dubourgh's kindness and remembered him in his will. The three charities each received £127, and since that day performances of The Messiah have been the means of adding vast sums to charities. Handel intended to return some day to Dublin, but the journey was long; he was ten days coming from London. His health was failing, and late he became quite blind. Citizens of Dublin are proud to remember that Handel's stay in our city was for him a time of great happiness. He died on the anniversary of the first performance of his greatest Oratorio, and is fitly buried in the Poet's Corner of Westminster Abbey, for he is, indeed, the Milton of English musicians.

FATHER MATHEW FEIS

POSITION OF IRISH BALLET

The future of Irish ballet was discussed by Miss Sara Payne, adjudicating on Saturday last at the Father Mathew Feis. She did not hold out much hope for Irish ballet as things were at present, for the teachers did not know the classical technique, and until they did ballet in Ireland would not progress much further. The entrants in the competitions, however, showed imagination, if they lacked technique, and the ensemble items were better than the solos. The same also applied to the action songs, although it was natural with children to act more confidently in a group. Physical culture competitions, including junior and senior challenge cups, were adjudicated by Miss A. E. Richards and Lieut. Twohig. Three Army teams competed. Irish language competitions were judged by Seamus O Modhrain, M.A.; Peadar Muircheartaigh, Eoghan Ua Loingsis and Tomas O Suilleabhain. On Wednesday last the open class piano (modern classic) was won by Miss Alice McCann, of Frankfield, Foxrock, Co. Dublin. Results:—

The Souvenir Programme of the Centenary performance of Handel's "Messiah," which is being produced in the Gaiety Theatre to-night, is a most ambitious production. Beautifully printed on excellent paper, the programme contains a full list of the performers, a commentary on the "Messiah" by Harold R. White, and a drawing of Handel by E. H. White. The cover of the programme is decorated by another drawing by the same artist, an impression of the "New Musick Hall," Fishamble street, as it was in 1742. The programme is printed by Messrs. Hely.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By MYLES NA gCOPALEEN

THE Myles na gCopaleen Central Research Bureau is working night and day on an invention that may mean the end of civilisation as we know it. Again, it is a new kind of ink, but nothing so footling as the other kind that disappears off cheques a few hours after you have written your signature with it. No, sir, this is something bigger, and when perfected will lead to a world-wide revolution, the end of which no man can foresee. It is provisionally called "Trink," and looks for all the world like the ordinary black ink you can buy for twopence. "Trink," however, is a very special job. When put on paper and dried, it emits a subtle alcoholic vapour which will hang over the document in an invisible odourless cloud for several days. A person perusing such a document is surrounded by this cloud. The vapour is drawn in with the breath, condenses on the mucous tract, gradually finds its way to the stomach and is absorbed in the blood. Intoxication ensues, mild or acute, according to how much reading is done.

Considerable difficulty has been encountered in perfecting the invention, not because of any major snag, but because our research workers emerge from the laboratory day after day in a hopeless state of inebriation and are unable to give

STORY OF THE FAILURE IN INDIA

SIR S. CRIPPS TELLS THE REASONS

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS, in a broadcast to the Indian people on Saturday night on the failure of his mission to India, and the rejection of the British War Council's draft declaration by the Indian leaders, said:—

"No one has been more fully conscious than I of the great difficulties which history placed in the way of a settlement of the relations between the British and Indian peoples, and, even more, between the different communities of India. In the past British Governments have been accused of using vague terms to cloak a lack of purpose. Congress has, since the outbreak of war, demanded two essentials. So there was a declaration of Indian independence—a new and free independence for India. The War Cabinet drafted that declaration with the object of convincing the Indian peoples and world public opinion that they desired to give freedom to India at the earliest practicable moment. The scheme is held up."

INDIA'S DEFENCE

Sir Stafford said that the War Cabinet had been in the position of trying to arrange a fair compromise between conflicting points of view. They could not, however, without denying the very freedom that they were conferring upon the Indian peoples. Some day and somehow the great communities and parties of India would have to agree on a method. "I regret profoundly, for the sake of India, for whom I have a deep and admiring friendship, that the opportunity now offered has not been accepted," he continued. "All this concerns the future. The immediate difficulties have been as regards the present."

The defence of India had been the concern of His Majesty's Government, and had led to an organisation for the control of the armed forces under a defence secretariat headed by the Commander-in-Chief, who was also the Defence Member. The Army in India, containing British and Indian units, the Navy and the Air Force, all came under his supreme command. "The demand has been that the defence of India should be placed in Indian hands. No one suggests that the Commander-in-Chief, as the head of the armed forces should be in the Indian Government, but they say that his functions in defence matters should be transferred to an Indian.

BRITAIN'S DUTY

"This may sound simple, yet it would mean a long and difficult reorganisation of the whole Defence Secretariat at the very moment when the enemy is at the gate and the maximum of efficiency is essential in defence. The duty of the British Government to defend India, and our duty to our American Allies, who are giving such valuable help, makes such a course impossible. To show our complete sincerity of desire to give the maximum of power we offered to create a new War Department, which would take over the Governmental relations of the Commander-in-Chief, General Headquarters, and the naval and air headquarters, leaving the rest of the Defence Department, with a number of othe most important functions, to the Defence Member. In a wider area of defence the administration would have been wholly under the control of representatives of India.

"But none of these things was the real cause. In their final letter addressed to me the Congress Working Committee have stated that the separate form of Government envisaged during the war is not such as to enable them to join the Government. They have two suggestions to remedy the situation—one, an immediate change of the Constitution, a plan which everyone else has admitted to be wholly impracticable while the war is proceeding; and, second, that there should be a true National Government with a Cabinet of Indian leaders, untrammelled by any control of the Viceroy or the British Government.

"Realise what this means—the government of India for an indefinite period by a Government nominated by the Indian parties incapable of being changed and the majority of whom would be in a position to dominate large communities. It is easy to understand that the great minorities in India would never have accepted such a system, nor could His Majesty's Government consent to her being placed in an unprotected position under a simple and possibly inimicable majority rule. It would be a breach of the pledges that we have given.

OPPORTUNITY MISSED

"Such a solution might sound simple to those who have no knowledge of the deep communal divisions in India. It is, in fact, wholly impossible and would not be acceptable by a very large section of the Indian people. The essential need in India to-day is for all the leaders of all the main parties and communities to get together in a single National Government. A scheme that attracts some and repels others such as Congress has suggested, is of little value. Inspiration in leadership is not to be found in forms or conventions. They will be dominated by combined parties. No constitution and no convention will work unless those who lead the people will come together with a common determination to make it work. Had the Congress leaders felt themselves able to join with the other leaders who were willing, then, indeed, a great work might have been accomplished.

"One thing I must make clear, I alone in India was the one responsible for what has been accomplished. Neither the Viceroy nor the Commander-in-Chief carries any responsibility for those negotiations. To those who throughout have done their utmost to help me I express to them—willing helpers of all nationalities—most sincere thanks for their help. We have all tried to help India along her road to victory and to freedom, but for the moment past efforts and history have proved too strong.

THE GREAT COMPANY

"We may differ as to the methods by which that freedom can be reached, both now and in the future, but upon one thing, surely, we must all be agreed—that it cannot be reached through a fresh conquest of India by a Power such as Japan.

"In this struggle for decent moral standards we do not fight alone, Russia, China and all the Allied nations take their place with us—a great company of gallant men and women who will give their all for those things which they know to be right and just.

"On the battlefields of Russia and China, in their cities and on their farms, millions of our fellow-men and women have already given their lives that we might live. To that great army of the heroic dead we not only owe a debt of gratitude, but we acknowledge the duty and the obligation to strive, to work, to find that righteous victory which they died to win, and not to yield to that barbarous aggression against which they made their bodies a living war of resistance."

MR. CHURCHILL'S MESSAGE

As soon as Parliament meets, Mr. Churchill is expected to make a statement on the Indian position. Following the Cripps' broadcast Mr. Churchill sent this message to Sir Stafford:—

"You have done everything in human power, and your tenacity, perseverance and resourcefulness have proved how great was the British desire to reach a settlement. Even if your hopes have not been fulfilled, you have rendered a very important service to the common cause, and the foundations have been laid for the future progress of the peoples of India."

The Congress Working Committee has summoned the full Committee for a two-day meeting at Allahabad at the end of this month. Presumably the Committee, which consists of several hundred members, will discuss what must now be done to meet the growing Japanese threat to India.

In a letter to the Congress President, Sir Stafford had revealed that Dr. Azad had made a last-minute suggestion for a change in the Constitution to enable a National Government, with complete powers, to be set up immediately, but, in the broadcast, Sir Stafford pointed out that, with no Legislature to which to answer, this Government would be an irresponsible body on the lines of a dictatorship, with dominance over important minorities. Britain could not agree to this without breaking her pledge to those minorities.—(Reuter.)

SCOUTS AT INCHICORE

About 400 scouts, cubs and guides of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides of Eire attended a special Service at the Church of the Oblate Fathers, Inchicore. Solemn Benediction was given by the Rev. J. Leech, O.M.I., who also delivered a short sermon and blessed a new flag of St. Michael's Group Sea Rangers, Dun Laoghaire. Prayers were then recited at the Lourdes Grotto, and a message from Lord Powerscourt, Chief Eire Scout, referring to the need for helping others, particularly to-day, was read by Mr. A. J. Purton, Chairman, Dublin Scouts. The parade was in charge of Mr. T. Brannock, D.S.M., Sea Scouts, and Miss H. de Selby, Catholic Commissioner for Guides, and Miss A. Guise-Browne, Co. Badge Commissioner.

Seals Destroy Salmon.—That extensive destruction by seals was being caused in Cork Harbour, was the complaint by Passage salmon fishermen to Cork Fishery Conservators, on Saturday. The depatation stated that seals were taking salmon out of every haul. Damage to nets was considerable, and the number of seals was annually increasing. The Chairman (Mr. W. J. Day) said that the Board had done all they could, but the authorities would not allow the use of ball cartridges on the river. It was agreed to assist the local Fishermen's Association in representations to the Department.

STOCK MARKET REPORTS AND PRICES

HOME FUNDS IN LIMELIGHT

ON the Dublin Stock Exchange last week trading was on a restricted scale, and public interest was confined to certain specialities. With the approach of the Irish and British Budgets, investors continue to adopt a cautious attitude. Consequently, we cannot hope for any material change in existing conditions for some weeks ahead.

Home Government Funds are still in the limelight and, despite further advances, the market is all buyers. In many cases prices look rather high, but at the same time it is not likely that any break will come in the near future, for we are passing through very abnormal times and the public are generally inclined to buy only safety-first securities. The field for investment in this direction is limited owing to the requisitions and repayment of certain stocks on the other side.

The Railway group is busier, and a feature is the demand for Great Northern issues. Although this company does not publish its weekly traffics, the belief in many quarters is that the company is doing extremely well, and, with stocks of coal on hands quite satisfactory, the outlook is considered bright. The Prior Charges hold attractions at their current levels. Great Southern stocks are fairly firm. The drastic cut in the road transport services is causing some nervousness among holders, while the serious coal position is holding interest in check.

The seriousness of this country's road transport services, due to the rubber, petrol and oil position, has caused nervous selling of Dublin Transport Ordinary shares down to 16/-. Despite the curtailment of services, the company should continue to do well, for private motoring will shortly be at an end. If the difficulty of supplies can be eased to any extent during the coming months, there is no reason why the current year's trading should not be quite satisfactory.

A Government spokesman recently announced that in the event of a prolonged war this country might find itself without sugar. This brought about heavy selling of Irish Sugar Preference shares, and they relapsed to 25/6 and are still sellers at the price. Ever Ready (Ireland) Ordinary shares are all sellers at 7/-. Since its formation this concern has done well, but the war has made trading very difficult. The report which is due next month, is eagerly awaited.

The Irish Industrial market is quiet. Recent dividends and reports show that, given more normal times, most companies would be in a healthy condition.

DRIED EGGS FOR HOSPITALS

Following the short Easter break, trading conditions in all departments of the Manchester Provision Market have been resumed, with all descriptions of commodities moving freely into consumption. During February there were 2,670 prosecutions under the Food Control Orders, of which 2,535 (94.94 p.c.) were successful. These proceedings were taken against wholesalers, retailers, members of the public and other offenders against the food regulations.

There has been an arrival in Manchester of dried eggs, the yolks flaked into a powder and kept in an airtight tin, but they will be distributed exclusively to hospitals, institutions, catering establishments and industrial canteens. These dried eggs, brought from Canada and America, need only one-seventh of the shipping space required for fresh eggs. The tins are in reserve.

There has been a new fortnightly issue of butter, for which full consumption is reported on the two oz. ration scale. In eggs the second allocation for April is available, and distribution is on the usual basis for ordinary and priority classes. The position has been eased by a seasonal increase in supplies of home produced, Eireann and Northern Irish.

In dead meat rather less fresh killed meat was available, owing to little Irish dressed being received.

WHY WAR LOAN IS RISING

By Our Correspondent.

THE main reasons for the absence of activity in the London Stock Markets last week were the political discussions in India, the approaching Budget and the war uncertainties. In the circumstances, it is not surprising that there was a general reluctance to operate freely. It may be, too, that the recent effort in connection with Warship Weeks—not only in London, but in various other important centres—has lessened the ability to support quoted securities. Judging, however, from the steadiness of the Gilt-edged section, there is a steady stream of buying orders.

Towards the week-end the tendency became firmer, this being most noticeable in "Gilts," among which War Loan 3½ per cent. touched 106¼—the highest of this year. The firmness was partly due to easy monetary conditions and partly to a revival of the rumour that the Chancellor of the Exchequer may make the terms for the "tap" War Loans less favourable for the buyer.

Another reason for the firmness of 3½ per cent. War Loan is that the price includes nearly six months of accrued interest, the stock being due to go "xd" on 27th April. Some financial institutions buy this security just before the xd dates, as the interest is paid without deduction of tax, and they are able to make profitable use of the money before the time comes for the tax to be paid.

RECORD TRAFFICS

Owing to the wartime demand for the products of various countries, mainly from the U.S.A. and Britain, the receipts of several overseas railways in which English capital is invested are showing encouraging increases. Recently the Central Uruguay Co. recorded the largest weekly "take" in its history, while the United Railways of the Havana showed the biggest earnings for many years past. The Peruvian Corporation Railway system is also showing improved traffic returns, and it is well known that the expansion in the receipts of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was so marked in 1941, is continuing. For the last ten days of March the gross earnings were 6,980,000 dollars, an increase of 1,411,000 dollars, or fully 25 per cent. These figures scarcely reconcile holders of the Common stock to absence of a dividend for 1941 when actually a substantial one was earned.

With a continuance of good receipts, some South American Railway issues will look more attractive. It is not unreasonable to expect that before long the English-owned Argentine companies will be earning their full Debenture interest.

Assuming that stage has been reached the stocks can be bought to give yields ranging from 6 p.c. on Buenos Ayres and Pacific 4 p.c. First Debenture to over 11 p.c. on Central Argentine 4 p.c.'s. In the Brazilian group, Leopoldina 4 p.c. Debenture would return 10½ p.c. if the full interest were being paid. Similar stocks of the San Paulo (Brazil) Railway Company have not been in default, for even the Ordinary receives a payment. The 5 p.c. Permanent Debenture promises a return of 6½ p.c., and the 4 p.c. issue one of 6¼ p.c. The 5 p.c. Preference stock may appeal to the investor willing to take a risk for the sake of a big return, for this can be bought to give a return of 8 1-3 p.c., but an objection to it is that the interest is not cumulative.

Various South American countries are benefiting from large purchases of primary commodities by the Governments of Britain and the U.S.A., coupled with the official restriction of imports. Economic conditions, therefore, have greatly improved, and, in one instance, the Republic of Colombia, this has led to negotiations for a settlement of the external debt. It is hoped in the city that these will result in some offer to the bondholders. In 1940 Colombia offered to pay half the nominal rate on its dollar loans, an offer which evoked a strong protest by the American and Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council.

The London price of Colombia 6 per cent. Bonds is about 36. The last interest payment was in 1934, and was made in the form of Funding Certificates. If something more than the offer of half interest is made, the present quotations would give scope for improvement.

VICKERS BOUGHT

Some demand has been evident of late for tax-free Preference shares of iron and steel companies, among which Guest Keen 6 per cent. 2nd Preference has improved to 30/-. At this price, and without allowing for accrued interest, the net yield is 3 1-3 per cent., which is equivalent to 6¾ per cent., with British income tax at 10/- in the £.

Vickers 5 per cent. Preference have also been bought, but the freedom from tax in this case is only up to 6/- in the £. Current prices of Preference shares of some other companies indicate the small return with which investors are content in these days.

It is true that about 7½ per cent. can be expected from Borman Long 5½ per cent. 1st Preference and 6 per cent. from John Brown 7 per cent. "A," but where the dividend is well covered by earnings the yield is quite moderate. On Hadfields 4½ per cent. Preference and South Durham 6 per cent. Pref. the figure is 5½ per cent. or less, and on Swan Hunter 6 per cent., Pease and Partners 5 per cent. and Thorneycroft 6 per cent. it ranges from 4½ to 4¾ per cent., less tax, in each case.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Saturday.—The trend was slightly lower during to-day's short session, with hesitance on the part of speculators and investors, further accentuated by the breakdown in the Indian negotiations.

Offerings were light, and fractional declines predominated. Bethlehem Steel touched a new low level for the year.

The close was easy. The turnover comprised 456 issues, of which 101 advanced, 205 declined, and 150 remained unchanged. —(Reuter.)

McCarthy's Four Goals Put Cork in Final

CORK..... 4 DRUMCONDRA... 2

THE holders of the F.A.I. Cup, Cork United, and Dundalk will contest the final at Dalymount Park on April 26th. Yesterday at Dalymount the United beat Drumcondra by 4-2 in the second semi-final before 25,421 spectators, the gate receipts being £1,292, bringing the aggregate receipts for the three matches in the semi-finals to £3,675, and the attendances to 64,858—records for the penultimate stages of the Cup.

For the first half of yesterday's match the challengers held their own right well, indeed. At the interval they were on equal terms at 1-1. Inside ten minutes of the second half the score was 2-2, but with twenty-five minutes to go the United had taken a lead of 4-2, and from that on there was only one team in it. In the first half it seemed as if Cork United were playing to a well-thought-out plan—to allow their opponents to play themselves out, and then go in and finish it. Anyway, that was what occurred. Their forwards played very attractive, if ineffective, football. For the first half hour there was not a shot from either forward line that looked likely to score. McCarthy's opening score (11 minutes) from O'Neill's pass was a simple one; so was the equaliser by Ward. The Cork backs and goalkeeper, following a corner, were actually caught napping, and Ward (15 minutes), lying handy, had no trouble whatever in turning the ball in. Good shots also were few and far between in the second half, and they came from the Cork men. Five minutes from the re-start a long one from Duffy hit the post, and McCarthy, taking it on the rebound, lashed it past Doherty, but Drumcondra's spirited reply brought the equaliser through Murray, whose free kick was blocked by the defence. The ball, however, came back to the inside left, who drove it through the ruck of players (9 minutes). Then Cork went all out for the win. A grand shot by McCarthy (18 minutes) made it 3-2, and a delightful overhead hook (20 minutes) from McFarlane's pass brought him his fourth goal—an exceptional feat for a player in a Cup semi-final. In flashes Drumcondra produced pretty football, and their inlives and full-backs put up a great resistance until midway through the second half, when the clever, methodical Cork forwards assumed complete command of the game, and set about displaying a superiority in all departments that became more and more pronounced. As a matter of fact, the holders won easily, and that without much apparent effort. The final should be productive of a grand game of football.

Madden was off the Cork team; McFarlane was on the left wing, and his place at inside right was taken by Bourke.

THE ARMY SELECTION

The Army team to play the F.A.I. International XI. on next Sunday at Dalymount Park is:—

LEINSTER'S HOCKEY SUCCESS

LEINSTER..... 2 CONNAUGHT..... 0

The last interprovincial of the season provided rather lifeless game at Londonbridge road on Saturday. Leinster gained their first victory of the season, and were well worth it; but had Connaught been at full strength the game probably would have been closer and more interesting. The absence of J. A. Delaney robbed the attack of any sting and they were rather easily held by the Leinster halves and backs. The winners' middle line, indeed, was absolutely first-class, and made matters easy for their defence; but Stewart was a lot more impressive at full-back than Lindsay.

MacDonogh was easily the best of the Leinster forwards and he scored both the goals—one in each half. The first was from a clear opening, but the shot was perfectly placed. The second was a brilliant effort for he worked his way right through the defence and beat the goalkeeper before pushing the ball into an empty net.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY

LEINSTER CLUB

Over 160 members and guests attended the coming-of-age dinner of the Leinster Motor Club at the Clarence Hotel, Dublin, on Saturday night. In proposing the toast of "The Club," Mr. T. W. Murphy said that the Leinster Club had revolutionised ideas as to what constituted reliability trials for motor cycles, and in the Patland it had set a fashion that had received the flattery of world-wide imitation. He recalled the activities of many who helped to lay the foundations of the club, instancing, in particular, the work of Messrs. J. Beggan and F. G. Holmes, two of the original members.

Rathvale Stable in Form at Leopardstown

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Walker and their son, Mr. D. A. Walker, had a big day at Leopardstown on Saturday. Mrs. Walker winning races with H.M.S. Sturgeon and Smerwick's Nephew, the latter trained by her husband, while Mr. D. A. Walker rode Enticement, also trained at Rathvale. Smerwick's Nephew was hard put to it to dispose of Capital Star after Ring of Gold, who had made most of the running, broke down, and was pulled up. H.M.S. Sturgeon, too, had a stern struggle to shake off Prince Blackthorn; but Enticement scored easily.

Another easy win was that of Ins An Mala, who now has won three of her four races this season. Tom Mix looked all over a winner at the last flight in the Tower Hurdle, but failed to withstand the challenge of Kingston Gorse. Details:—

BELVEDERE AGAIN IN RUGBY CUP FINAL

Old Belvedere (holders) and Wanderers qualified for the final of the Leinster Senior Cup, which will be played next Saturday at Lansdowne road.

OLD BELVEDERE ... 14 BLACKROCK 3

Old Belvedere beat Blackrock by 1 goal, 1 penalty goal and 2 tries to 1 try, and their victory never looked in doubt. It was their most impressive display in the competition; their forwards were always masters in the tight, and their backs had some very neat bouts of passing. G. J. Quinn, with a quick follow-up and tackle, paved the way for the first score, which was registered by O'Neill. That was the only score of the first half, and in the second G. J. Quinn and K. Quinn crossed for tries after dazzling runs which left the Blackrock defence standing. Thorpe converted one and later Aird landed a penalty goal. Just before the end Chamberlain scored a try for Blackrock after a resolute run.

WANDERERS ..... 8 DUBLIN U. ... 6

Thanks chiefly to their captain, A. B. Robertson, who scored all the eight points, Wanderers defeated Dublin University by 1 goal and 1 penalty goal to 1 penalty goal and 1 try in a match which provided plenty of hard and exciting play. Wanderers' victory was well deserved, as they played for the greater portion of the second half without their clever centre three-quarter, T. McCollum (injured). B. Harvey being brought out of the pack to full-back, and J. A. Mattson went into the three-quarter line. The trinity backs lost many chances in the early stages, and a few minutes from the final whistle Carry had a glorious opportunity of pulling the game out of the fire with a favourably positioned penalty shot at goal, but he sent wide.

Do Lacy paved the way for Doyle to open the scoring for Trinity with a try at the left-hand corner, which Carry failed to convert. A little later Carry kicked a penalty goal, but before the interval Robertson had landed a penalty goal for Wanderers. The score which gave Wanderers victory was got by Robertson, after Reid had sent out from a scrum a few yards from the line, and Collins had drawn the defence. Robertson added the extra points.
